"The Fundamentals of Public Relations: What it is and How to Do it Well gives students a complete understanding of the essentials of the discipline and teaches them how to apply and practice them successfully. While many standard textbooks concentrate on explaining what public relations is, The Fundamentals of Public Relations also emphasizes how to conduct public relations and initiate successful public relations tactics. After a brief introduction to the field the book moves to public relations research and the legal implications of public relations practice. Separate and distinct chapters are devoted to employee, media, community, consumer, and government relations. Essential forms of communication are discussed in chapters on public relations writing and social media. The book concludes with an examination of the future of public relations and the role of tomorrow's practitioners. The Fundamentals of Public Relations effectively combines an introduction to key concepts with a practical approach to successful implementation. The book is a foundational text for students new to the discipline. It can also serve as an ancillary reader for courses in marketing and advertising. Dr. Joseph Harasta, APR, is an associate professor of communication studies at Kutztown University of Pennsylvania. He earned his Ed.D. in innovation and leadership at Wilmington University, and his subsequent research and instruction have focused on integrated marketing communications, public relations planning, and public opinion. He has developed public relations campaigns for professional sports teams, colleges and universities, and for-profit and non-profit organizations. His most recent publications include, "Jersey Strong, Right?: A Communications Analysis of New Jersey's Post-Hurricane Sandy Tourism Recovery," from Case Studies in Strategic Communication, Volume 3 and "The Amish--A People of Preservation and Profitability: A Look at the Amish Industry in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania" from Journal of Amish and Plain Anabaptist Studies, Volume 2. He is accredited in public relations from the Public Relations Society of America."

An Applied Approach: Customization for Kutztown University Catalog for the Exhibition: Shifting Paradigms: The New Arts Program and Kutztown University The Marlin and Regina Miller Gallery, Kutztown University September 12-October 11, 2015 In 1974, James Carroll, a professor in the Department of Fine Arts at Kutztown University, founded a unique visiting artist series called the New Arts Program. For over four decades, hundreds of artists, choreographers, musicians, and writers have traveled to Kutztown to meet with students and the public. The list of residents is staggering for their diversity and historical significance, comprising a veritable "who's who" of the avant-garde: Richard Serra, Vito Acconci, John Cage, Philip Glass, Yvonne Rainer, Trisha Brown, Nam June Paik, Laurie Anderson, and so many others. As Kutztown University celebrates its sesquicentennial, the Marlin and Regina Miller Art Gallery is pleased to tell the story of the New Arts Program and recognize James Carroll for four decades of service to the arts community. In addition to enriching the area with pertinent contemporary art programming, Carroll helped cement the university's reputation for excellence in the arts. His initiative inspired countless students while establishing a climate for experimentation and critical discourse. This exhibition features the man who created the New Arts Program, the students who benefitted from its realization, and those who have sustained it through their participation and fundraising efforts. These six artists--James Carroll and Kutztown University alumni James Clark, Joseph Egan, Paul Harryn, Michael Kessler, and Barbara Kilpatrick--represent paradigm shifts within art and education that were initiated by Carroll and the New Arts Program.

Policy, Punishment, and Society provides students with an overview of the laws and policies that govern the U.S. criminal justice system, as well as how they influence approaches to crime and perspectives on punishment within our society. The text is divided into four distinct parts. Part One focuses on correctional trends, policies, and practices with chapters that discuss the goals and intentions of punishment; the ways in which law, crime, and society intersect; and how sensationalized cases and controversies can influence correctional policies and practices. In Part Two, students learn about policy development as it relates to sexual offenders, juvenile offenders, domestic violence, and rape cases. Part Three features discussion of marijuana legalization and criminalization, capital punishment, mass incarceration, and the policy, scope, and nature of justifiable crimes. The final part provides readers with engaging and informative interviews between the author and formerly incarcerated individuals. The case studies detail experiences related to re-entry into society, including community supervision, establishing a home plan, and challenges related to public perception. Concise, informative, and approachable, Policy, Punishment, and Society is an ideal resource for courses and programs in criminal justice and corrections.

Kutztown University (KU) traces its origins to the Fairview Seminary. In 1860, Henry R. Nicks opened Fairview Seminary as a select school where more advanced subjects than those offered in the area were taught. In 1864, Nicks opened a new Maxatawny Seminary on the site where KU's Old Main stands today. With growth, efforts were made to convert the seminary into a public state normal school. On September 15, 1866, Maxatawny Seminary officially became Keystone State Normal School (KSNS). KSNS was dedicated to preparing students for the teaching profession. With emphasis placed on student life and the school's Pennsylvania German heritage, this book tells the story of KU from its modest beginnings as a teacher training school to its current mission of providing high-quality education.

Archival research of any magnitude can be daunting. With this in mind, Alexis E. Ramsey, Wendy B. Sharer, Barbara L'Eplattenier, and Lisa Mastrangelo have developed an indispensable volume for the first-time researcher as well as the seasoned scholar.

Working in the Archives is a guide to the world of rhetoric and composition archives, from locating an archival source and its materials to establishing one's own collection of archival materials. This practical volume provides insightful information on a variety of helpful topics, such as basic archival theory, processes, and principles; the use of hidden or digital archives; the intricacies of searching for and using letters and photographs; strategies for addressing the dilemmas of archival organization without damaging the provenance of materials; the benefits of seeking sources outside academia; and the difficult (yet often rewarding) aspects of research on the Internet.

Working in the Archives moves beyond the basics to discuss the more personal and emotional aspects of archival work through the inclusion of interviews with experienced researchers such as Lynée Lewis Gaillet, Peter Mortensen, Kathryn Fitzgerald, Kenneth Lindblom, and David Gold. Each shares his or her personal stories of the joys and challenges that face today's researchers. Packed with useful recommendations, this volume draws on the knowledge and experiences of experts to present a well-rounded guidebook to the often winding paths of academic archival investigation. These in-depth yet user-friendly essays provide crucial answers to the myriad questions facing both fledgling and practiced researchers, making Working in the Archives an essential resource.
