Art for Charlottesville

This book constitutes the refereed proceedings of the Third International Software Product Line Conference, SPLC 2004, held in Boston, MA, USA in August/September 2004. The 18 revised full technical papers presented together with a keynote abstract and summaries of panels, tutorials, and workshops were carefully reviewed and selected for inclusion in the book. Organized in sections on business, architecture, and quality assurance, the papers address topics ranging from how to start a software product line in a company, to case studies of mature product lines and the technology used, to test strategies of product lines, to strategies and notations for creating product line architectures, and to the importance of binding times in creating product lines.

Please note that the content of this book primarily consists of articles available from Wikipedia or other free sources online. Pages: 19.

Chapters: Austin App, Hans Schmidt (Waffen-SS), Institute for Historical Review, Jew Watch, Journal of Historical Review, Lindner Ethics Complaint of the 83rd Minnesota Legislative Session, Mark Dankof, Mark Weber, Ron Paul newsletters, Stormfront (website), The Political Cesspool. Excerpt: The Political Cesspool is a weekly talk radio show founded by James Edwards, and syndicated by Liberty News Radio Network and Accent Radio Network in the United States. First broadcast in October 2004 twice a week from radio station WMQM, it has been broadcast on Stormfront Radio, a service of the neo-Nazi Stormfront website, and as of 2011 is broadcast on Saturday nights on WLRM, a Christian radio station in Millington, Tennessee. Its sponsors include the white separatist Council of Conservative Citizens and the Institute for Historical Review, a Holocaust denial group. According to its statement of principles, the show stands for the "Dispossessed Majority" and represents "a philosophy that is pro-White." It has attracted criticism-including from The Nation, The New Republic, the Stephen Roth Institute, the Southern Poverty Law Center (SPLC), and the Anti-Defamation League-for its promotion of anti-semitic, white nationalist and white supremacist views. According to the SPLC, the show has featured a "Who's Who of the radical right," including members of the Ku Klux Klan; they say Edwards has probably done more than anyone in America to promote neo-Nazis, Holocaust deniers and other extremists. The show features Edwards and his co-hosts Bill Rolen, Winston Smith, Keith Alexander, and Eddie Miller, as well as producer Art Frith. Former staffers include Geoff Melton, Jess Bonds and co-founder Austin Farley. Its guests have included author Jerome Corsi, Minuteman Project leader Jim Gilchrist, former Constitution Party presidential...

A scientific response to the best-selling The Bell Curve which set off a hailstorm of controversy upon its publication in 1994. Much of the public reaction to the book was polemic and failed to analyse the details of the science and validity of the statistical arguments underlying the books conclusion. Here, at last, social scientists and statisticians reply to The Bell Curve and its conclusions about IQ, genetics and social outcomes.

After 9/11, liberal professors and students faced an onslaught of attacks on their patriotism and academic freedom. In a lively narrative this book tells the story of attacks on academic freedom in the past five years. It highlights nationally prominent and lesser known cases, drawing upon media reports, university documents, and reports and studies seldom seen by the public. It shows how conservative attacks on higher education distort the facts in order to pursue an assault on liberal ideas. A wave of Web sites and think-tanks urge students to spy on their professors for any sign of deviation from the new PC: Patriotic Correctness. Free speech on campus is facing its greatest threat in a half century, and Patriotic Correctness: Academic Freedom and Its Enemies documents the danger to rights and looks to solutions for ensuring and promoting the free exchange of ideas requisite in any thriving democracy.

The Southern Poverty Law Center started with noble intentions and has done much good over the years, but a pernicious corruption has undermined the organization ' s original mission and contributed to a climate of fear and hostility in America. Hotels, web platforms, and credit card companies have blacklisted law-abiding Americans because the SPLC disagrees with their political views. The SPLC ' s false accusations have done concrete harm, costing the organization millions in lawsuits. A deranged man even attempted to commit mass murder, having been inspired by the SPLC ' s rhetoric. How did a civil rights group dedicated to saving the innocent from the death penalty become a pernicious threat to America ' s free speech culture? How did an organization dedicated to fighting poverty wind up with millions in the Cayman Islands? How did a civil rights stalwart find itself accused of racism and sexism? Making Hate Pay tells the inside story of how the SPLC yielded to many forms of corruption, and what it means for free speech in America today. It also explains why Corporate America, Big Tech, government, and the media are wrong to take the SPLC ' s disingenuous tactics at face value, and the serious damage they cause by trusting this corrupt organization. Since 1866 the Ku Klux Klan has been a significant force in Mississippi, enduring repeated cycles of expansion and decline. Klansmen have rallied, marched, elected civic leaders, infiltrated law enforcement, and committed crimes ranging from petty vandalism to assassination and mass murder. This is the definitive history of the KKK in Mississippi, long recognized as one of the group ' s most militant and violent realms. The campaigns of terrorism by the Klan, its involvement in politics and religion, and its role as a social movement for marginalized poor whites are fully explored.

In the 1980s, the term "hate group" began to appear increasingly in American media reports, often referring to the Ku Klux Klan or various neo-Nazi activities. There is no legal definition of the term, as it is not illegal to belong to such organizations, and so the designation of hate groups generally falls to private advocacy groups that claim to track them, such as the Southern Poverty Law Center (SPLC) of Montgomery, Alabama. When the media or academic researchers require data on hate groups, they often turn to advocacy groups, usually due to a lack of other sources and because of the ease of access to the data and to perceived experts in the field. This thesis will examine the hate group data produced by the Southern Poverty Law Center, analyzing its accuracy and reliability by examining the SPLC's methodology and claims. I will also examine the SPLC's reputation as a trusted source of information by reviewing the history of the organization, its rhetorical practices, and the public statements of several of its key officers. As any study or academic research is only as valid as the accuracy of the information upon which it is based, it is essential to evaluate accuracy of the source of the data. Many of the SPLC's rhetorical practices can be compared with the fearmongering and exploitation found in classic propaganda techniques and will be analyzed further in this paper. Instead of serving as an unbiased clearinghouse for hate group information, the SPLC often pursues an ideologically-driven course that is designed to influence a targeted, politically progressive audience. Because this unvetted data is readily accepted by the media and researchers, and ultimately by lawmakers and law enforcement agencies, there may be serious First Amendment issues involved. While this paper in no way condones or supports hateful ideologies, it is imperative to remember, as the American Civil Liberties Union notes, that "Constitutional rights must apply to even the most unpopular groups if they're going to be preserved for everyone."

In what ways does the legal and political monitoring of "hate groups" and "hate group activities" benefit the American left? Possible victims of crimes? Law enforcement? The state? Specifically, in what ways does the Southern Poverty Law Centers "hate map" challenge and/or reiterate relations of power and knowledge? This thesis offers a feminist critical analysis of hate group surveillance and the Southern Poverty Law Centers mapping of hate. The Southern Poverty Law Center (SPLC) is a progressive legal advocacy group that aids in the surveillance of "hate groups" and legislation against "hate crimes." I investigate the assumptions grounding the SPLCs rhetorical use of the term "hate" and analyze their surveillance and mapping in order to add to the growing body of literature that that seeks to rethink the institution of whiteness and the relationship between progressive groups and law enforcement. The SPLCs "Hate Map" offers a visualization of "hate" while simultaneously ignoring and obscuring racism. This thesis is meant to produce an alternative reading of this map and the SPLCs hate group surveillance. Using a critical feminist framework that is intimately linked to critical race theory and anarchist criminology, I interrogate the SPLCs methods of mapping and surveillance as well as their connection to law enforcement and governmentality. In analyzing SPLCs "Hate Map" and their "Law Enforcement Resources" page, I contend that the SPLC's use of "hate" in lieu of racism is a reflection of their uncritical analysis of systematic racism and state violence associated with whiteness. While I recognize SPLCs important role in combating crimes against marginalized groups through advocacy and legal aid, I contend that their rhetoric around "hate" and use of mapping and surveillance may potentially collude with governmentality and state violence against historically disenfranchised populations.

The Camp of the Saints - 2017

This compendium of information on terrorist groups, violent international criminal gangs, and other extremist groups that have been or are currently operating is intended for use as a reference guide and research tool for academics, students, government officials, security personnel, military personnel, law enforcement personnel, and the public. The publication also lists and describes political organizations and religious or ethnic factions that espouse violence or display the threat of violence in their philosophical or operational standards. The information was collected from a broad range of sources, including interviews with, law enforcement and military practitioners, researchers and academics, and government officials. The organizations are listed geographically by continent and country. The listing for each organization covers its stated aims, ideology, or policy; areas of operation, numbers of active members, numbers of supporters, structure, headquarters, leaders' names, funding sources, types of activities, publications, network contacts, significant actions and activities, and trends.

For many students in urban public schools, the routines of standards-based instruction and frequent testing remove the possibilities for sustained inquiry and critical engagement in school and with the larger world. Restoring Dignity in Public Schools demonstrates how urban public schools can create thriving, authentic centers of learning. Drawing from rich narratives of human rights education (HRE) in action, the author shows how school leaders can create an environment in which a culture of dignity, respect, tolerance, and democracy flourishes. The book examines the dynamics of HRE in practice, defines its constituent elements, and explains how these components work in tandem to produce schooling that encourages young people to critically interact with the world around them and imagine different alternatives for the future. This timely book provides a viable alternative to the currently favoured strategies of increased testing, privatization, and disciplinary control.

Restoring Dignity in Public Schools

Software product lines are emerging as an important new paradigm for software development. Product lines are enabling organizations to achieve impressive time-to-market gains and cost reductions. In 1997, we at the Software Engineering Institute (SEI) launched a Product Line Practice Initiative. Our vision was that product line development would be a low-risk, high-return proposition for the entire software engineering community. It was our hope from the beginning that there would eventually be sufficient interest to hold a conference. The First Software Product Line Conference (SPLC1) was the realization of that hope. Since SPLC1, we have seen a growing interest in software product lines. Companies are launching their own software product line initiatives, product line technical and business practices are maturing, product line tool vendors are emerging, and books on product lines are being published. Motivated by the enthusiastic response to SPLC1 and the increasing number of software product lines and product line researchers and practitioners, the SEI is proud to sponsor this second conference dedicated to software product lines. We were gratified by the submissions to SPLC2 from all parts of the globe, from government and commercial organizations. From these submissions we were able to assemble a rich and varied conference program with unique opportunities for software product line novices, experts, and those in between. This collection represents the papers selected from that response and includes research and experience reports.

This book helps us all understand what happened to America in the last part of the 21st century and on into today. Though few if any of us can remember the founding, the last time outright hate was seen in America in bulk was during the Revolutionary War. You may recall from History Class in Third Grade that eventually, those in favor of separation from England outnumbered those who felt the US should keep letting the British sock it to Americans without even letting the Crown know that we were upset with how things were going with the occupation. These colonists were known as loyalists. They felt that everything in America was because of the English. They remained loyal to the British Crown during the American Revolutionary War. Americans in favor of America hated the Loyalists like the hate we see in the streets and on the news today. The Loyalists did not want to be known as Patriots. Instead, they preferred being the Tories, the Royalists, or the King's Men at the time. They were deeply opposed by the other group of pro-America colonists who took the name "The Patriots." These pro-Americans supported the revolution and called the others "persons inimical to the liberties of America". Nobody can deny that hate in America is on the rise. Statisticians show that there are nearly a thousand known hate groups in the United States. The number increases each year and is up 4 percent in just this past year, according to the Southern Poverty Law Center (SPLC), if you can believe what they preach. The SPLC says that the leading hate mongers today are white supremacist and neo-Nazi groups. Most Americans do not see this but in our own backyards we do recognize the evidence that hateful acts have proliferated since Donald Trump began his presidency and in fact, it happened even before the inauguration. There is often irony in facts. As people who never paid attention to hate and bigotry began to notice it everywhere, especially in the fake news media, the many expressions of overt bigotry they witnessed made many regular Americans own shall we say, "more subtle biases," seem benign by comparison. In other words so many manifestations of hate were in the forefront that those not active in the hate displays were picking up biases from the arguments of the warring sides but since they were not active, they did not recognize their own bigotry and biases. Most Americans blame the other side. Ironically, they are right, but the fault today lies on the hateful left, and the ugly media-CNN, MSNBC, & the one-time great New York Times. Said differently, there was a liberal study in which the participants perceived more tolerance on their own parts for prejudice after the election than before. The truth is always absent from the rantings of the hate mongers. It helps to read the comments section in articles that attempt to teach about the new acceptable norms as the authors are often as bigoted as the bigots which they discuss. Few articles ever represent reality as the media is controlled by the leftists, and their hate filled agendas. Here is a comment from a Latino who according to leftists should not like Trump, yet she does: As a Trump supporting Latino I have been called every name in the book by so-called tolerant, progressive liberals and they have even wished I would die. I have NEVER experienced such outright bigotry as I have by liberals. Hate is contagious when we find the thoughts of others to be outrageous and harmful. We work to demonstrate the problems and the solutions in this book and I bet once you pick this book up, you will not be able to set it down. God bless America! Down with Hate!

Software Product Lines: Going Beyond

The Camp of the Saints (Le Camp des Saints) is a 1973 French novel by author and explorer Jean Raspail. The novel depicts a setting wherein Third World mass immigration to France and the West leads to the destruction of Western civilization. A new (2017) introduction by Leonard Payne provides a cultural analysis.

The controversial, bestselling book (37,500 hardcover copies sold) that helps define the debate about one of the most important and hotly contested issues facing America: immigration.

Keenly observed and deeply grounded in contemporary Southern politics, "Blue Dixie" reveals the changing face of American politics in the South itself and its impact on the rest of the nation.

With SPLC 2005 we celebrated the formation of a new conference series, the International Software Product Line Conference (SPLC) which results from the "unification" of the former series of three SPLC (Software Product Line) Conferences launched in 2000 in the USA, and the former series of 7ve PFE (Product Family Engineering) Workshops started in 1996 in Europe. SPLC is now the premier forum for the growing community of software product line practitioners, researchers, and educators. SPLC offers a unique opportunity to present and discuss the most recent experiences, ideas, innovations, trends, and concerns in the area of software product line engineering and to build an international network of product line champions. An international SPLC Steering Committee has been established and it is the wish of this committee that from 2005 on, the SPLC conference will be held yearly in Europe, America, or Asia. The technical program of SPLC 2005 included. - two keynotes from David Weiss (Avaya, USA) and Jan Bosch (Nokia, Finland), both leading experts with academic and industrial insights; - 17 full and 3 short research papers organized around the following themes: feature modeling, re-engineering, strategies, validation, scoping and architecture, and product derivation; - eight experience reports describing commercial application of product line practices; - two panels focused on special topics in product line practice and product line research; - tool demonstrations; - a Hall of Fame session that continued the SPLC tradition in a slightly revised format. In addition, the technical program was preceded by a tutorial and workshop day that included ten half-day tutorials presented by well-recognized experts and 7ve workshops on speci?c areas of product line research.
